

Every Morning

Every Morning when I wake up
And feel you lying right beside me
I close my eyes again and smile and get real still
Then like a glove your love surrounds me
It's a warmth that astounds me
As familiar as it is, it always will

What have I done to deserve such devotion?
What did I give to receive all this?
Up from the darkest nights and emotions
Into your arms and heaven's kiss

Every day before the sun's up
I feel you wrap your arms around me
I close my eyes again and smile and say a prayer
For all the good things that surround us
For the miracle that found us
For every blessing I am seeing everywhere

How in the world did I get such a notion?
How did I live before all this?
Up from a sea of doubt in an ocean
Into your arms and heaven's kiss

Every morning when I rise up
Before my eyes have even dried up
I close them back again and wipe away the night
Another long dark hour is gone through
And now this morning I am with you
And before this moment ends, we'll see the light

When did it need no more correction?
When did it change from that to this?
Somewhere I turned in a new direction
Into your arms and heaven's kiss

Into your arms and heaven's kiss