

Let's Face It: You have a drug problem if...

... you only have one facial expression

... you've lost your appetite for solid food

... your reflection always startles you, at first; then in time you learn to avoid it

... you drank the bong water

... you're always looking for a doctor who's more easy-going

... parents reign in their kids when you walk onto a playground

... when others speak to you they either seem frightened or extra careful not to upset

... the simplest instructions seem mind boggling – oh, screw it – they're a waste of time

... sex isn't the only way to get off

... a good night's sleep is a thing of the past

... you think rehab is for quitters

... your hair and gum lines recede faster than the tide

... tracks are either a skin problem or an optical phenomenon

... your pupils are so dilated you can't tolerate daylight without good, cheap shades

... when photographed at the zoo, someone notices you resemble the raccoons

... your first impulse is to hide when there's a knock at the door

... flash backs replace memories

... you suspect anyone who smiles at you

... listening to anything but music leaves you cold

... old friends aren't as understanding as strangers

... doing community service is a bigger bummer than doing time

... you wonder why cops always seem to pick on you

LFIYHADPI... 2

- ... valuables aren't as valuable as how you feel right now
- ... nobody really "owns" anything
- ... to you, "juice" means liquor
- ... a dealer has nothing to do with cars, real estate or playing cards
- ... your nickname is Mr. Natural
- ... sunshine is something you take – not tan in
- ... you lose your balance when you turn your head
- ... you can't feel your tongue, let alone speak with it anymore
- ... patience is not a virtue; it's a pain in the ass someone is trying to stick you with
- ... you have roach burns on your lips
- ... you think roaches are a good thing
- ... the Stone Age must have been a great time to be alive
- ... paranoia is part-'n' parcel with being alive
- ... nobody sees the little man that keeps bugging you
- ... you have a direct line to the voice of Ra
- ... when driving, 25 mph seems way too fast; let alone, 55.
- ... you're a Lilly exec.with a shit-load of product to move.
- ... you look older than your parents.
- ...